

My aim was to reveal how the continued expansion of our urban environment, population and technology could create feelings of stress and confinement in a congested, high-speed future.

