"In the Outdoor and Environmental Studies course, we looked at both the historical and contemporary relationships with the outdoor environment. It was great fun learning about how different interactions and perceptions have changed over time and therefore resulting in different impacts. We attended several camps that were fun and very useful in creating a better understanding of the topics we were learning. It was helpful in seeing evidence of the past interactions and impacts and taking part in current recreational activities like bushwalking and skiing. It was also great learning about the future for the environment that include methods of sustainability and decisions that need to be made."
